What's Happening This Week

We will be starting a new Bible Unit on Abraham. We will continue talking about the promises of God and how God ALWAYS keeps those promises!

We are wrapping up our social studies unit and starting a science unit on weather. To wrap up our social studies unit, we'll be making a timeline to tell about our past. This will be done at home. Please look for more information on this project in your child's folder on Monday.

In math, we are beginning to add and subtract. If the opportunity arises at home, have your child show you their skills by adding and subtracting using their fingers. We are working with numbers 1-5.

We have been practicing sight words in class, next week, students will be taking home sight words to practice at home. I will be sending home more information about this next week.

On Saturday, October 5, we have the Pumpkinfest Parade! Hopefully you got my email with the details. I hope to see you all there, I would love if my kindergarteners could ride in the parade with me!

Note from the Teacher: This week I finished up testing with everyone, and they all did SO well! I have an incredibly intelligent group of students this year, I'm excited to see where that will take us!

reminders

We are doing a coin war for Blood Water Mission to help provide clean water for the children and families in Africa. In class, we talked about chores we can do at home to earn coins so that we can help kids get clean water to drink. Our kindergarteners felt very strongly about making sure these children across the world had clean water to drink, so please help us earn some coins that we can donate!
